University of Rajshahi
Plagiarism Policy for MPhil/ PhD Dissertation

1. Preamble

1.1 This policy is framed for determining, detecting, preventing and dealing with plagiarism to ensure high academic standards, honesty and integrity in MPhil/ PhD research of the University of Rajshahi. University of Rajshahi considers intellectual dishonesty and plagiarism in all forms a serious offence.

1.2 The University of Rajshahi is fully aware that effective production and management of intellectual property is essential for quality and originality of all research by faculty members and fellows. The University of Rajshahi recognizes the fact that plagiarism poses a significant challenge for originality of academic research.

1.3 This policy serves as a guide for all faculty members and research fellows of the University of Rajshahi to respect, observe and maintain high academic standards, and originality of academic research.

2. Definition of Plagiarism

'Plagiarism' is a term widely used in academic research to mean copying, or using another person's work, words, images, opinions, discoveries, artwork, music, recordings or computer-generated work such as computer programmes, software, websites, the Internet or other electronic resources, either published or unpublished, as one's own personal work intentionally or unintentionally without duly acknowledging the original source.

3. Types of Plagiarism

Plagiarism includes two basic types—Intentional and Unintentional. Intentional plagiarism consists of sources not cited plagiarism and sources cited but still plagiarized. Non-intentional plagiarism is the situation where an author does not conform to orthodox standards for referencing. It is also a situation where the writer imitates a source text written in a language that the writer does not understand the technical and conceptual meaning and thus lacks the ability to present the ideas in his/her own words.

4. Examples of Plagiarism

Examples of plagiarism include:

- (a) direct replication of one's work without duly acknowledging the original source;
- (b) reproducing or transcribing work from one language to another without acknowledging the source;
- (c) rewording of your own work or that of another without appropriately acknowledging the source;
- (d) piecing together sections of the works of others or one's own into a new whole;
- (e) resubmitting work that has hitherto been graded;
- (f) presenting a jointly produced work (in whole or in part) as one's own independent work;
- (g) presenting the works of students with or without their consent as one's own; and
- (h) making use of professionals or professional agencies in producing one's work or submitting works which has been written on one's behalf.
